With Kara Seva, 8 medics take timely treatment to schools in rural Karnataka

By Deepthi Rao

Aug 30, 2018

Students of Yenepeya Medical College, Mangaluru, are helping detect diseases among young children through Kara Seva, an initiative that organises screening camps.

Early detection of diseases, whether benign or malignant, can prevent a lifetime of unnecessary discomfort. While certain conditions can be neglected, children in rural Karnataka are in need of quality medical attention. Certain common conditions are easily neglected in rural areas and lead to students not performing well at school. Screening in such places is imperative.

In 2016, a group of second year medical students at Yenepeya Medical College in Mangaluru found that screening camps for government school students were necessary for detecting certain conditions at an early stage.

Kara Seva

Karaseva is an organization for the early detection of common diseases in school children by the medical undergraduates of Yenepoya university. We aim to screen the students of government schools who don't have access to quality health care and the children who are found to have conditions are treated in Yenepoya Hospital.

We are a group of dedicated and diligent medical students eager to serve the society we live in. During our study course we came across young children with conditions which could easily have been prevented if they had had access to the right kind of medical attention. The conditions they suffered from was reflected on their attendance in school and hence their education. This thought reinforced Karaseva the importance of screening and prevention

We believe that the biggest change can be brought only if small steps are taken. This lead to the birth of Karaseva. We started out as a small group of eight students out to make a difference. Now its expanded to well over eighty members.
